

THE GAZETTE.

TUESDAY EVENING, JANUARY 23.

Killed by a Prospective Son-in-Law.
Miss Martha Morton, 16 years old, and very beautiful, from the wilds of DeKalb county, Ala., passed through Birmingham, Ala., Sunday afternoon en route to Cookeville, Texas, where she goes to join her lover, Andrew Bynum, whom she will marry. She became a quieted and happy at year's end when she was on a visit to Alabama and has since been corresponding with him. She became engaged to him, but her father bitterly objected. Bynum sent her money with which she went to Texas and on Friday she ran away from home, going to the home of her brother-in-law, Bill Chase, a noted moonshiner. The father gave chase, reaching Cookeville Saturday morning, and demanded to know where his daughter was. A row occurred between them, and the father shot her. Saturday the girl mounted a horse and rode 15 miles to Fort Wayne where she took the train for Texas. She said that, despite the death of her father, she would marry Bynum. Morton, the dead man, was put under at Sandy Mills. The murderer is still at large but a press is after him.

It Was Somebody Else

She was a big woman and her hair was brown. "Has my husband been here?" she inquired of the barkeeper.
"Don't know him, mum," responded the man in the white apron.
"He's a little fellow about knee-high to a looper, got scruffy-brush whiskers and baby blue eyes," she exclaimed.
The barkeeper thought for a brief space.
"There was a little chap here about an hour ago," he said.
"Did he drink anything?"
"No, mum. A gentleman asked him to, but he declined."
"Ugh," she grunted. "He isn't here here. Keep your eye out for him, will you?" and she passed out.
